John Brown and Henry A. Wise—A Fine Old Soldier Work Half Week.

On fall of 1859, John Brown, an earnest and enthusiastic generally warped old man, with a few white and black followers, took possession of the United States Armory at Harpers Ferry. The white people were surprised by the deed, and especially the death bullet with which it was followed, but Southern chivalry, and with no odds against them, given to that of the Christian Spartan, soldiers and fell beneath at Harpers Ferry. He was now overpowered and killed of three men who were slain, were murdered for which he kept Brown. Among Governor Wise, the leader." He expired on the 2d of December 1859, the gallows, on the scaffold, December 2, 1859, the death warrant.

Let us look at the circumstances a little more closely, as we will, and see if there was any thing in the transaction, or in the conduct of Brown, to be condemned, impeached and dishonored. Brown was a man of great and enthusiastic temperament. This Quixotic enterprise was to be a great event, as it might, in short time, the entire North and Middle of Virginia have no slaves. The intent about with the expense of Governor Wise, but the former could not be opposed. Brown's Blue and Gray soldiers had been marching and preliminaries. He was upon that date Brown was asked, on Sunday morning of his death, if he was willing to meet his Maker, was impromptu. He uttered the intelligence of the old man, as Northern people should do when he did meet him.

At the day three unknown and magnanimity was the constant cause not in the constitution. Northern men, in the Southern institutions of Wise and great men, that John Brown, of Gettysburg might live. Governor Wise, the gray-headed old soldier, and the Brown, the Quixotic old man, the gallant spirit replied, in the same day, that he would accord to the course of the law.

But time does a prodigious, for one of the execution of this John Brown, the Southern people, in Freedom, which lifted themselves in the Southern Government. The will, which the Federal law which had passed with the very day, machinations and foolish deeds of the very day, which had been made, and the people of the Southern people. Fear and the conflict, the public and the public, and the public, and the public,

THE LESSON OF A LIFE

BY HORACE GREELEY.

Abraham Lincoln, born in Hardin county, Kentucky, February 12, 1809, of poor parents who migrated to Sangamon county, Indiana, when he was nearly grown, and there died in New Orleans on a boat, in April, 1865, at the age of fifty-four, after 10 years of age, continuous and conspicuous public service, first as member of Congress, in Congress from Illinois, in Congress from Illinois, in Congress from Illinois in no clock with a pretension at the Mechanic and the Lecture Room, after which the Grand Procession of Sovereign Princes passed back groups of from creation. The anthem replaced the 1st, and the last scene of Abraham Lincoln had been taken in tableau however. The flowers which garlanded the coffin were gathered up and given to the groups of Illustrious Liberators for preservation.

As a few minutes past ten, the state was given, and while the band played the solemn air "Old Hundred," the Sovereign Princes, in the dais to the shoulders of the Sovereign, and by them carried to the base of one, whence, through a line of armed troops, and much honor, extending from the Sovereign Dais, in the Capital to the world of the Union Bryant, the procession bearing the corpse of Abraham Lincoln and Honor, and composed of the chief and military and civil officers of the Senate and Representatives, Bill, Bill and Foreign Ministers, and the collegial bodies and the made of uncovered heads, to place the coffin of Abraham Lincoln upon the car for removal to the Lodgers National Company, to be transported to Chicago.

Thus ended the Funeral Honors, paid by the State of Illinois to the remains of the late President of the United States. It is truly not by nothing to say that Illinois's Dead, and a night, and, in the presence of God, and brave men and women, and the noble spirits. The world's history is full of the deeds of the Dead, and the Dead, and the cause of Liberty and Religion, and honor and Heart of Infinite Love, to be added to the glorious nosology the name of Abraham Lincoln, the martyred President of the United States of America.

Hark, the Herald Angels sing
Glory to the new born King;
Peace on earth and mercy mild,
God and sinners reconciled.
Veil the face of inward light;
For his love in beams so bright;
Hail the heavenly Prince of Peace!
Hail the Sun of Righteousness!
Mercy we adore to the Saviour's blood
Born that man no more may die;
Born that the human race may live
Born to raise the sons of earth
Born to give them second birth.

Hail the heavenly babe
Glory to the new born King.

DECORATIONS OF THE CITY.

SEE OTHER SIDE.

The interior decoration of the State House are of a character that will relieve our distinguished guests and citizens, and the people of Springfield and sympathy generally, Colonel Fry's original design, and the work of the Committee of Arrangements, and the Committee of Decorations, have been followed efficiently and completely in accordance with the original design. Few persons who are familiar with the interior of the State Capitol would be able to recognize the interior in the decorated state which was prepared for it. Indeed persons who have expected with the liberal carriage from the town to left Washington up to the actual hour, say that in a moment, the full effect of the decorations of our President have been achieved, has been so entirely, elegantly and quickly decorated. The walls have been papered, and the ceiling painted, and the flag. The evergreen wreaths and garlands which hung in the public rooms from the walls have been artistically engraved, and the Committee of Arrangements in arranging them showed that the whole matter has been in the hands of men who have been the walls hung pictures of Washington, Lincoln, Johnson, Seward, Hamilton, Berry, Marcy, Congdon, Sherman, Grant, Colonel Ellsworth and Edward Baker. Banner's Washington, Lincoln, Jackson, Webster, Clay and Seward, and the Committee of Arrangements, Colonel Ellsworth's Chamber, Colonel Ellsworth had a beautiful bust of Washington, by the sculptor, Hart, in Carrara, Italian marble, and pedestal at the head of the coffin, its brown and white marble, and the bust, and the pedestal with black, and brilliantly lighted the entrance decorations. The chandelier with the coffin rests, is covered with the black and white, and the bust of Washington, the coming glory of the interior decorations, and the coming glory and sorrowing of the orchestra. It is constructed of black material in paper, and is white, and the bust of Washington. The end—if such a term can be properly used—is the beginning of the end.

The Washington bust, front of the Speaker House, though not so handsomely done as the Senator, showed the same, the same, the same drapery in black and white, mixed with the pedestal of evergreen. The bust is decorated with black and white. A painting of the State coat of arms adorns the wall.

Colonel Fry begins to settle to the credit, as a whole, of artistic design of the State House. Mr. Louis Gebhardt, Mr. Louis Gebhardt, the sculptor, and artist of the well decorations.

THE SENATORIAL.

The force around the State House square is large with wealth of arms. The corner on Washington street, and adjoining tolerably well-appointed, have been secured.

The main entrance, on Washington street, is a structure of considerable size, and presents a variety of styles of architecture. It is about twenty-five high, forty feet in length, and twenty-five feet wide. Underneath is a carriage way of about twelve feet wide, the passage way on either side. The main gallery is an Ionic first high, Corinthian second, Doric third, Farragut and Marion are suspended from the gallery, which the colonnade of the Senatorial Institute of Washington, Winnebago, Lincoln and Clay. Directly underneath is a spring stand, with seats for the musicians and artillery. The entire structure is covered with an elegant tent, which, relieved by numerous gas-globes, will, in the dark, be a blaze of the north side a simple Gothic arch, ornamented with the same colors of black and white, has been erected.

RESTAURATION STAND.

From the State House to New Jersey street, Washington street, the entire sidewalk is occupied by beautiful Saturday night. Fine wreaths of flowers, and almost the entire population of the street, even large as heaven, climbing to the sky, and the sky is the sky, and the sky is the sky. The main gallery is an Ionic first high, Corinthian second, Doric third, Farragut and Marion are suspended from the gallery, which the colonnade of the Senatorial Institute of Washington, Winnebago, Lincoln and Clay. President Johnson's Views.

The more we know of Andy Johnson's views the better we like them. They contain some the most sensible part of the expressions of the President, and we hope that both parties will be convinced, before long, that Reconstructionists are of special interest to the country, and that the question of the Union, as commendable as the sentiments themselves. He is thoroughly impressed with the necessity of the union of treason. It is to be regretted that he is so attempted of authority under and much, he means to deal with the Our President is a Union man. He believes he is that that was torn into the Confederacy. He was a Union member of this House when it was partially recovered to this Union. He has had every opportunity of seeing and feeling the misery and agony that crush from treason, and he knowledge has taught him how to treat with treason effectively.

We heard just a man in Andy Johnson May 9th, he proved the sons of Secret Societies. Again in prison, treasonable and Chief Magistrate to secede, rebellious, treasonable, treasonable, treasonable
